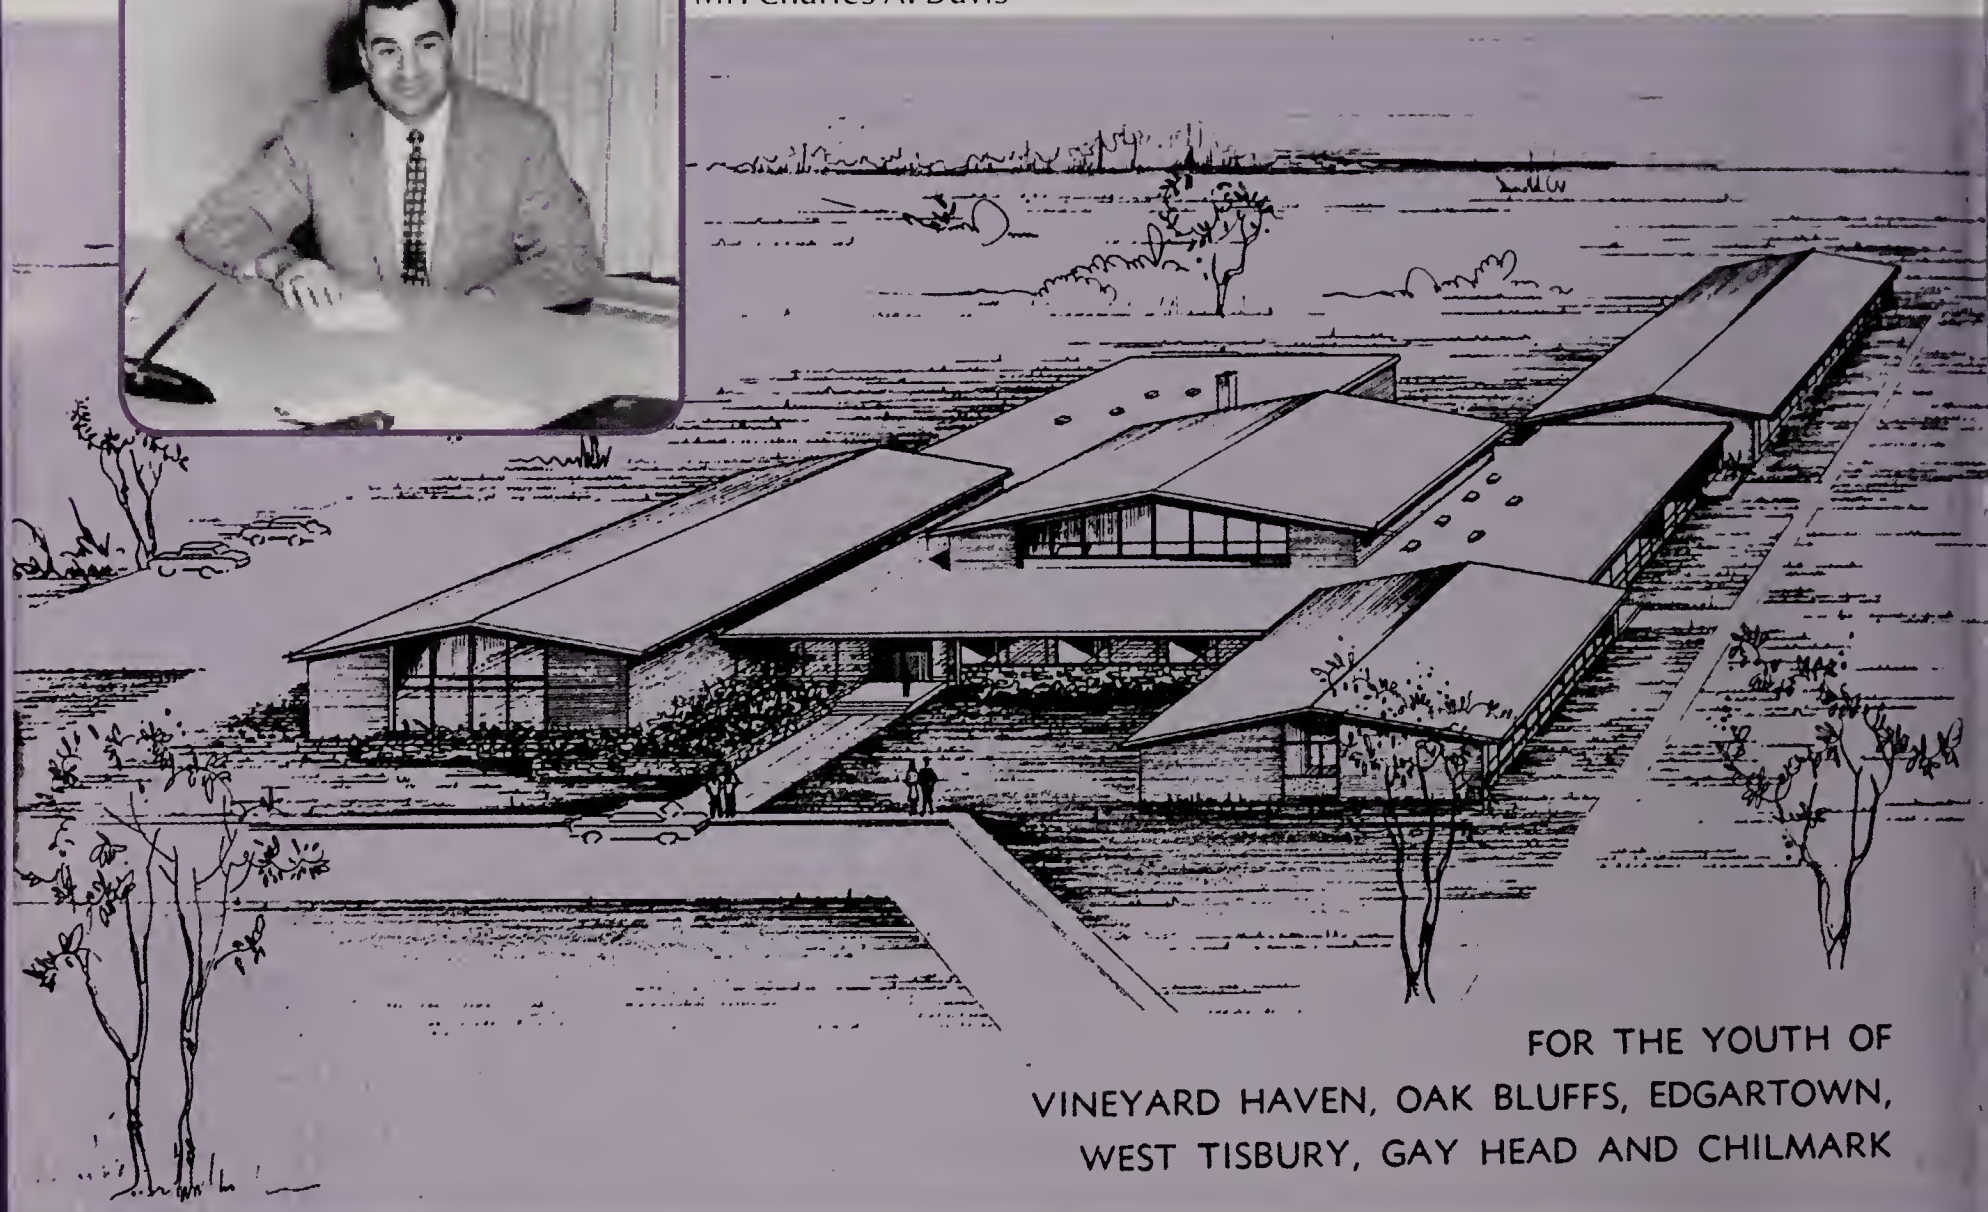
MR. CHARLES A. DAVIS, AND MRS. REGAN

Our first principal, 1959-1979:
Mr. Charles A. Davis



The Martha's Vineyard Regional High School opened its doors in September 1959. It was the first island-wide high school, replacing Tisbury High School, Edgartown High School, and Oak Bluffs High School. 2009 marks our fiftieth graduating class, our fiftieth yearbook, and our fiftieth year of classes.

"The Regional High School established fifty years ago has been an oasis for both adolescent and adult education every since. It took a great deal of vision to create this first regional school on Martha's Vineyard. We are grateful to those who took that opportunity and nurtured it as their own. Fifty years of graduates is testament to its success.

"The high school is one of the gems of the community, and I had the privilege of being its principal from 1999 until 2008. May its next fifty years be as fruitful and lively for the families and students of the Island."

Peg Regan

1999-2008 Principal:
Margaret Reagan

MR. NIXON

"As I begin to reflect back on my first year as Principal of Martha's Vineyard Regional High School, I only hold those who teach here, and those who are being taught, in even higher esteem. The fine line between who teaches and who is being taught also has become a little fuzzier, and that is a good thing. We learn daily from each other. We have students who live very busy, complicated lives, yet they manage to always rise to any occasion. They can maintain their studies, make the play-offs in sports, put on theatrical and musical performances second to none, publish an award-winning newspaper, and move on to very prestigious colleges and successful careers. This could not happen without the undying support of the adults in the building.

"For the most part, teachers toil away within the confines of their rooms in anonymity. They are here before the students arrive and are still here after they are long gone. They work hard at improving themselves and their craft. Their day does not end with leaving the building, as additional hours at home are employed to create and correct in our continual effort at MVRHS to improve curriculum, instruction, and assessment. The teachers, through their Professional Learning Communities, have taken an active part in running the school this year. This allows everyone who has a stake in our success to help plan and implement the road we need to travel to obtain the goals of greatness. It does, however, take more then a teacher to run a welcoming, successful school.

"We have custodians, secretaries, financial people, schedulers, assistants, computer techs, librarians, cafeteria workers, bus drivers, and coaches who make the school run like clockwork. Their contributions have a tendency to go unnoticed because of how smoothly things run. We are grateful for the large group of unheralded, hard-working people who fill these roles. We also have a community and parents like no other.

"Our parents and community have always been supportive of the high school since its inception back in 1959. They are also there to volunteer their time, money, and energy to make this the best learning experience possible for our young people. The residents of the Island have always held what we do here for our young people in high esteem, and reinforce that belief every year by supporting the school budget that is required in these times of numerous educational mandates. It takes a large, collective group, all focused on the same end result, to make this school as successful as it has been through these many years.

"I feel honored to be a part of only three other people who have run this school since 1959 and, if I can make but a small contribution compared to those who went before me, then my time here will be classified as a success. With our dedicated young people, hard-working staff, and always supportive community and parents, I see the future of Martha's Vineyard Regional High School to be just as bright as it's gloried past. My ideal of making this school a role model for other schools to follow will surely come to pass just on the will of all of these great, hard-working people alone."

A LETTER FROM DR. SCOTTEN

A letter from our second principal, Dr. Gregory Scotten:

"The Vineyard High School is a very special place. It has grown for the last fifty years from the unique character of the Island people, its leaders, its parents, and its students. During the twenty years between 1979 and 1999, I know it was nurtured by one of the best faculties ever assembled, with a base of lead teachers from earlier years.

I relied on such gifted and forward looking teachers as John Mayhew, Dan Sharkovitz, Joe Didato, Mike McCarthy, Bill Schwabe, Doug Herr, John Morrelli, Herb Custer, Jean Loud, Shawna Nute, Nancy Shemeth, Ann Lemeneger, Chef Pierre Hebert, Jay Schofield, Donald Herman, and so many others, too numerous to mention.

Bob Nute challenged us all to greater appreciate some of our students' dormant talents. His music program at times included over forty percent of our high school students. He brought a Minnesinger group, whose talents always shined, to several European cities. Herb Custer fulfilled his dream of integrating a broadened vocational education program into a part of our school life. The late Lou Toscano began the movement to bring administration into the computer age and led the rest of the faculty by introducing Advanced Placement courses for our more capable students. Paul Brissette always looked beyond the ordinary and with fellow teachers Jim Lobdell, Chris Baer, and Jeff Bernier brought the integrated arts and technology together. Marge Harris and Barbara Murphy pushed the curriculum envelope at every turn. Ann Scotten set an important tone of relating to her students and in helping fellow teachers. She was an important key in bringing us an outstanding performance in the 1993 school accreditation program that took place immediately after the struggle of opening the "new half" of the high school. Jean Loud made certain that every teen had access to their greatest possible success. The late Marion Higgins set the standard for teaching excellence.

How many schools had interactive television courses for both adults and students? How many schools searched and found funding for sheltered workshop programs for the variably gifted. How many schools provided multiple services for senior citizens including participation in regular classroom courses? How many schools shared with the resident Native American community to offer educational support and credit for student participation in its cultural events, and offered to work with tribal leaders in developing an approved indigenous language course? How many schools had student led programs to gather tons of educationally rich books and distribute them to needy inner city and rural children?

We had an incomparable support staff led by Margaret Serpa in finance and administration. During those years her work was admirably supported by Jay Swartz, Bonnie Jackson, Rose Cappucci, Judy Forbes, Bonnie Steere, and many others upon whom we really depended. Head Custodian, Reuben Silvia, literally opened the building on its first day in the '50s, built the sports field bleachers himself, and pampered the high school facilities for nearly forty years as a loving father cares for a child.

We were blessed with dedicated librarians who worked selflessly serving the student's learning needs. Among them were Anne Lesnikowski, Dr. Maureen Griffin and Sandy Mott. Nurse Pat Brown spent most of her professional life at the high school caring for students and faculty alike. Her professional excellence was taken up by Joan Desautelle.

The students and their accomplishments could fill volumes. During those twenty years students attending college rose from 45% to 65%, and colleges wanted our students because their Island roots tended to make them more reliable. Our activities programs burgeoned with more participation and innovation. I remember one Cultural Celebration Day in which the students provided the important ingredients and our Wampanoag young people set the tone with an impressive display of their traditions.

One of the most impressive tests regarding the community's valuing its high school came during those years. The student population increase of seventy percent loomed large, demanding doubling the size of the high school plant. This was made more imperative by a crying need for updated science labs, technology rooms, and facilities for both student and Island arts.

The "conventional wisdom" was that the voters would not support the proposed new construction, so forty interviews and meetings led by faculty members, administration, committee members, and private citizens took place in just two months. Senior citizens called the administration asking how they could help promote the issue. When the secret ballots of voting day took place, it seemed a miracle of community pride unfolded. Every town voted in large numbers, and the number in every town gave the school an overwhelming "Yes!" The town of Gay Head (now Aquinnah) gave the largest endorsement with a voting margin of ninety percent.

In those decades numerous town leaders, school committee members and public spirited citizens provided leadership when it was needed. During the most challenging times the school had particular support from John Curelli, Joan Borkow, Jim Norton, Fred Williams, Al Daniels, Ed Coogan, Jeff Mattison, Andriana Ignacio, and others.

In these years the school received impressive recognitions. These included a declaration by the Massachusetts Legislature and the United States Secretary of Education. Martha's Vineyard Regional High School also twice earned the designation as a White House Blue Ribbon School. These came from two different Presidents and placed the school among the best in the nation.

My memories are full of wondrous students of all gifts and challenges as well as amazing educational accomplishments by teachers. I was so privileged to spend twenty years enveloped in such a place. Thank you.

"We were kind of . . . home-townish."

The yearbook staff got a chance to sit down with Judy Cronig, Judy Catlowe, and Jackie to talk about island life 50 years ago, and gained a new appreciation for our modern conveniences.

Island kids no longer stop at "Yates' Drug Store" for a Chocalate coke from the Soda Fountain, they get off the island as often as possible, which was "very uncommon" for our Alumni who can remember years with out leaving once. There was no American Idol, but there was the iconic Amercican Bandstand. Elvis was still alive and the social deviant James Dean ('Rebel Without a Cause') was bigger than James Franco ('Pineapple Express').

Now and then: Judy Catlowe, and Jackie

Though a lot has changed, there are some island traditions that are yet to fade:

The Class of 1959 remembers

- Fried Clams from Gios
- Oak Bluffs was always dead in the Off Season
- Beach Parties, though the back then hotspot "the bunker" no longer stands.
- An Active Performing Arts; Orchestra, Band, and Chorus.
- Waiting all year for the Agricultural Fair

Now and then: Judy Cronig

DDR (Dance Dance Revolution) club is not just a club, it's a team sport with uniforms and tournaments. They train and prepare just like any other team would for a game. It's a perfect sport for the non-athletic because it's all around fun. DDR is a great exercise because you don't even realize you're exercising; it's not the focus. It's a great way to get fit, enjoy yourself and socialize. The DDR club's goal is to win the Anime Boston DDR competition.

The Fencing Club is a fifteen-year-old club that meets at the high school Monday and Thursday evenings. Members include elementary age students through retirees.

Members from the high school:

Ian Tripp
Riley Donegan
Douglas Fraser
Tabitha Clark

The club provides the opportunity to learn the skills of fencing. It is a non-competitive club.
All members must belong to the United States Fencing Association (USFA).
There is no charge to high school students to be a member of the club and they may borrow the equipment they need at no cost. Some members elect to purchase their own outfits which include jacket, mask, gloves, knickers, and sword at a starting cost of around $200.00
The swords are: foil, epee and some saber.

There are three types of fishing within the club: salt water, ice fishing, and open fresh water. The fishing club is associated and sponsored by the Martha's Vineyard Striped Bass and Bluefish Derby as well as the Martha's Vineyard Surf Casters' Club. Club members learn many basic and advanced fishing needs such as knot tying, boating skills, lures, tackle, weather conditions, tides, shore, and boat fishing. There are several tournaments and about fifteen club trips. They fish at Wiggy's Pond, Uncle Seth's Pond, and Watcha Pond on Sundays.

The Model United Nations is an academic simulation of the United Nations that involves students in current day issues about civics, effective communication, globalization, and multilateral diplomacy. In Model UN, students take on roles as diplomats and participate in a simulated session of an intergovernmental organization (IGO). Participants research a country, take on roles as diplomats, investigate international issues, debate, deliberate, consult, and then develop solutions to world problems.

The Disney Career building Program offered two classes for the students to explore: The Career Discovery to become Leaders in Excellence and to Promote personal and professional success. This year, they are focusing on sales, new product items, inventory, and more club members. Their next goal is to visit businesses who sell similar products to their own.

CHILMARK SCHOOL

1996 K-1 Ms. Kahl

Did you know that teenagers from Aquinnah, Chilmark, and West Tisbury attended Tisbury High School in the early 1900s?

Teachers' Party.

April 12, 1917, Miss Levine, the assistant High School teacher, gave a party at her home for the teachers of the grades. A very enjoyable evening was spent, pianoforte and victrola selections having contributed towards the pleasures. One of the teachers discovered that it was Miss Levine's birthday, so a beautiful hand-embroidered guest towel was presented to her, which she carefully laid away as the first article of her " hope chest. WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE NEW LUNCH SYSTEM & WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE LUNCH?

"It's alright. I don't remember my number. My favorite lunch is the chicken nuggets." Zion Morris (9)

"Its amazing! I love it! I like the buffalo chicken wraps." Erik McElhinney (9)

"Horrible! Bring back french fries because those were the best things they ever had." Lamar Moreis (11)

"It takes too long. If we are going to have this system we should have a longer lunch. My favorite lunch is the quesadilla". Troy Small (11)

"Hate it! Its inefficient. I like it when they have mashed potatoes." -Connor Johnson (12)

"I don't mind it. I like 2nd lunch. My favorite lunch is the quesadilla." -Jack W. (10)

"I think it sucks. It takes too long. I like the bagels." Rachel Pires(10)

"Its a horrible system. It's promoting a credit card society." Mark Reppert (12)

"The lunch system is great if you forget your money. It's fast because all you do is punch in your school ID number." Emmie Schreck (12)

On the transition from Eighth Grade:

"I thought I was going to be really nervous but I wasn't at all. Obviously it's a big transition but there's nothing too bad that can happen. Everyone says you're going to get lost but you really don't. I like it a lot better - there's a lot more freedom. As opposed to O.B. where there were lots of stupid rules. I like it a lot better up here."

On Freshmen year:

"It's your start. You get to figure out out who you are. who your friends are going to be for the next four years. I know my friends have changed a lot this year. You start to learn what you're going to do in college. You choose electives that your going to want to be doing later in life. You choose if you're going to be an honors student, C1, or C2. You learn a lot more about who you are, I think. You get to have more freedom to choose what you want to do."

On Freshmen fashion:

"Uggs and NorthFaces are totally overdone."

Ian Tripp

On his favorite school lunch:

"I get the salad bagel - it's the same price as a salad, but you also get bread. I can go into a very long description of why its better, but to save time I don't think I will."

On his least favorite school lunch:

"Pop tarts. From the vending machine. Bad decision. I ate pop tarts for lunch and fell asleep last period."

Academic interests?

"I'm really interested in history, as well as zoology. Zoology probably more than biology. I'm not a mathematician, I can say that much (Why not? Quite frankly I enjoy having my hair.) Next year I'm looking forward to the marine biology course, and I'm looking forward to psychology senior year."

Did You Know

Martha's Vineyard Regional High School was the result of years of planning for an island-wide high school, but it was not the first such plan. Starting about 1916, a broad movement began for a county high school, which was to be called "Union High School." Superintendent Charles A. Crowell Jr. spearheaded the original effort, and Robert W. Martin took over the movement when Crowell retired in 1918. "Set your town jealousies to one side!" declared Martin. After several years of town meetings, planning committees, and an act of the Massachusetts state government brought Union High School very close to reality, the town of Edgartown torpedoed the whole movement by voting in a new school of their own in 1924, angering many regional school proponents and effectively ending the effort for another quarter-century.

On her favorite class:

"Drawing and Painting. Right now we are drawing. We've done "the smoke project" and a still-life; now we're doing the man-machine. For the smoke project: we had to choose from various pictures of smoke and draw just one of them. The interesting part was that we had to morph a person or an animal into the picture.

I'm going to take creative writing next year. I'm pretty excited about that."

On travel:

"I've never been out of this time zone, but I've been to Canada a lot because my mom's Canadian. I've been to Saint Martin. I'm taking French and I hope we do a trip to France next year. Sadly, my French is not that great."

On her favorite food:

"I really like sushi. Especially Dragon Rolls. I used to get it from Seasons - that was the best."

Ian Brew

Ian is a blackbelt in Karate.

On sophomore year: "It is exactly the same as freshmen year"

Five words to describe sophomore year: "It's not over yet - damn."

On manga: "I usually just read it on the internet now. Onemanga.com is a website that just has everything. It's got an alphabet, and you just go through them. I've read... I have no idea how many. Depending on which one it is, some stories get updated. Some of them are finished already. Some are finished before they should be."

When I go on the computer I end up looking at recipes or check up on my new eBay account. I recently got an eBay account and had found that it's a very addicting website. I always check to see if there are things that I want. I end up not bidding high enough to win something.

One of my favorite things to receive as a present is a cookbook. I guess you could say that I'm a cookbook "junkie". I am currently in the process of making my own cookbook online on Cookbook.com.

Altering our everyday favorite recipes in to something that can be healthy at the same time is one of my hobbies. Sometimes I'll incorporate vegetable or fruit puree's into the baking that I do. The other day I made cinnamon buns, and then added pumpkin, squash and carrot purees. They turned out really good. However I have learned that there are some amazing foods that are unhealthy, and by altering it, you don't achieve the same taste; and if you don't eat the "unhealthy" foods everyday there's no need to alter your favorite recipes.

I like to experiment with spices. My family likes to call me the "Vegetable Queen" because I'll take whatever vegetable on hand create my own seasonings out of things out of herbs and spices in the kitchen cabinet, drizzle a little olive oil and sauté or I'll bake them with parmesan cheese on top.

Sometimes I get so overwhelmed discovering new recipes because there are so many out there to experiment with.

Matthew Fisher

I like to work in the theatre; I usually stage manage or work on light design. I've worked on all the plays that we've done in the school since I came here, like Charlie Brown, The Miracle Worker, and Boxes. We're working on a show right now called Letters, that we wrote. The Miracle Worker and Boxes were my two favorite shows. Both of them were really involved with acting, and they showed how great we all work together, and how strong our ensemble is.

When I stage manage through the rehearsal process I have to make sure I write down everything that everyone is supposed to be doing on stage and when it's time for the actual show I call light cues and sound cues so they happen when they're supposed to.

"When my cat killed a large northern Woodpecker I knew instantly I was going to use it for a photography project. With the bird in mind, I remembered I had been meaning to do another shoot with Naomi Pallas, a sophomore who had been doing some modeling for me. Luckily, I decided to combine these and found a new form diptych using a method in which I conceptually change photography from a subtractive art form to an additive art form, hence the empty background. Once I knew I was combining the girl and the bird I went further and had Naomi mimic the positions of the bird and mirrored the bird's plumage in what the girl is wearing. The result is an expression of repeating forms within an environment."

Sophie Lew

Sophie has lived on Martha's Vineyard her entire life and attended the Oak Bluffs Elementary School through eighth grade. Foreign language has been a strong suit for Sophie, who has a dual citizenship in France. She has taken both French and Spanish in high school, as well as becoming co-president of Cultura Club. Sophie's schedule keeps her a busy bee. She is Co-Editor-in-Chief of the the High School View, two time homecoming Queen, member of Model UN, HSF Feminist Club, and National Honor Society. Along with her many clubs, she also plays as a forward on the field hockey team and as a home for the lacrosse team.

When she isn't in school, Sophie likes to donate her time to two of the island's prominent charities. During the spring, she serves as a board member and a counselor for Camp Safe Haven, a camp for inner kids who are diagnosed with HIV. During her summers, she spends over a month as a counselor at Camp Jabberwocky, a camp for people with disabilities.

Next Year Sophie will be attending Middlebury College, VT, where she will be enrolled in February of 2010. Before college, she hopes to travel to France, South America, India, and Africa.

Rebecca Amos Institute

The Rebecca Amos Institute (RAI) is one of two alternative programs offered by Martha's Vineyard Regional High School. RAI students and faculty work together to create an environment that fosters personal, social and scholastic growth for 11th and 12th graders. Classes are offered in small group settings with curriculum being driven by student need. All coursework follows the rigors established by the traditional MVRHS day program and supports students who are college bound as well as those interested in entering vocational programs upon graduation. RAI is designed to work with students who have the capacity to ask questions, persevere, and explore different styles of learning.

Overseas field trips threatened, policy changes explored

By Sophie Lew and Eliza Gowell

For regional high school students, places like Stonehenge, the Louvre, the Parthenon, Shakespeare's birthplace, and the ancient ruins of Chichen Itza may soon become dreams instead of destinations.

Quite possibly, students will not be able to travel to those or other places on school trips due to policies that many teachers feel are unclear or too restrictive.

Teachers who once felt that the school would stand behind them should a problem occur, now believe that language in the current policy would place virtually all liability on them.

"The liability seems to be shifting to the teacher," said history teacher Corinne Kurtz. "And how that supports education and the teacher, I don't understand."

Currently, the school differentiates between school-sanctioned and school-sponsored trips.

School-sponsored field trips are classified as sports and other academically approved trips. Other field trips, which may either be overnight or abroad, and are self-selected, are classified as school-sanctioned.

This distinction shifts the liability from the school's insurance to the teacher's.

If teachers choose to take students on a school-sanctioned field trip, it is necessary for the teachers to go to their own insurance provider and take out their own insurance policy for the trip.

Should something go wrong on such a field trip, the teacher could be held liable and without the support of the school.

"I don't even want to think about what could happen," said Ms. Kurtz. "Why would any teacher bother taking this on?"

"They would take your house, they would take your job," said English teacher Keith Dodge. "It has seemed to me that the administration has tried to distance itself from field trips."

Although this has been the policy since 2007, school officials are adopting new interpretations of some portions of the policy.

Many years years ago, teachers could collect money for international trips and give it to the school for safe keeping. School personnel would write checks from the travel account as needed.

The current policy, in place for several years, requires that teachers set up an outside bank account to deposit the funds and that they write checks to cover expenses as needed.

"I find it odd that they dictate rules but bear no responsibility," said Ms. Kurtz.

Recently, the high school administration did agree to allow monies collected from students for in-country field trips, such as a visit to the Museum of Science in Boston, to be deposited in school accounts.

Principal Stephen Nixon responded quickly last week to help teachers planning a theater field trip find a way to salvage the event when confusion about the financial policy occurred. He created a place in each department where teachers can deposit monies for in-country trips only.

Many teachers are also concerned by the fact that school officials are requiring them to use their own personal days for a schoo-sanctioned field trip if any school day is used as part of the trip.

"It's already a big personal commitment to do a field trip," said English teacher Bill McCarthy. "But then to kick in some of their personal salary? It just seems like it sort of lowers the morale for that kind of undertaking."

"All of a sudden you're almost being punished," said Ms. Kurtz. "I'm going out on a humongous limb to take kids on field trips. It's too bad. The stuff that feeds the soul seems to be the stuff on the altar."

School administrators and Superintendent Jim Weiss are in the process of studying field trip policies and revising them as needed. The School Council is set to meet about it Thursday, February 5.

Some teachers believe that field trips will be heading towards the private sector, in which the experience of going on field trips would likely be shifted to chaperones who are professional strangers.

"There is something to be said about going on field trips with people you know and respect," said government teacher Olsen Houghton. "Traveling with strangers would detract from the overall learning experience."

However, the present atmosphere in the school is one of worry regarding the continuation of field trips, especially international ones. Several teachers who were considering trips have decided not to plan any. Said one teacher who requested anonymity, "Why should I spend hundreds of extra hours planning and chaperoning a trip and wading through the maze of policies written in lawyer-speak? The school does not seem to care or support us anymore. I'll neve go again with kids. And tha makes me sad. It's such an impo tant part of their education. It what they remember during the 25th reunions. Now it's gone."

"I'm going on the England ex change trip this year, but I'm no doing any international trips afte this," said Mr. Dodge. "It's to risky."

"That's going to be the big ques tion," said Ms. Kurtz. "Why woul any teacher take on the respons bility of international travel?"

Despite the situation, many o the teachers still cling to field trip as a necessity in this day and age

"I've been organizing interna tional trips for many years," sai World Language department cha Kerri O'Keeffe. "My French an English students still keep i touch and say how much of a life altering experience it was. It is v tal to learning a language."

Said senior Ben Hopkins, "It unfortunate if trips were to disap pear because it unofficially broad ens your scope of the world an allows you to experience other cu tures. It lets you see what the res of the world is like and not just th Island and the United States."

Ben David rocks the halls

By Kristen Parece

In the afternoon, with the building empty of students, unsung hero custodian Donald Ben David travels the halls escorted by the sound of country music.

Mr. Ben David, 76 years young, was born and raised on the Island. He has four children, nine grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

When he was a young man on the Vineyard, Mr. Ben David was given the nickname "Buck." The nickname stuck with him and to this day, it is still used. Students and faculty members at the high school will still refer to him as "Buck."

Mr. Ben David attended the Oak Bluffs High School. He graduated in the year 1950 with only 12 students in his class.

For over 50 years he worked at his family car dealership called Ben David Motors in Oak Bluffs.

Because Mr. Ben David has been on the Island for so long, he is familiar with many families. One of the reasons he loves his job at the school is because he gets to see Island children grow up, including his own relatives.

Mr. Ben David is known for the humor he brings to work. All his co-workers agree that his humor is one of his best qualities. Tom Church, Mr. Ben David's supervisor, said, "He is very dependable and always goes the extra mile."

"If you hear country music, you know Buck is nearby," said Rob Oslyn, a co-worker.

"If you play country music backwards, you will get something back," said Mr. Ben David. "The songs are all about losing something."

Mr. Ben David loves riding motorcycles. While he was in the Air Force from 1952-1956 he toured Europe on a BSA motorcycle.

He is part of the Martha's Vineyard Harley Riders, which is an organization that donates all of their funds to charities on the Island.

The Harley Riders are the biggest donor for the Red Stocking Fund. In 2007, they donated over $17,000 to the charity.

Mr. Ben David has been the Island roads with the Harley Riders for over 25 years.

He usually displays his well-known figures during the holidays and, whether they know him or not, Islanders look forward to driving by his house to see the changing displays.

For this past Thanksgiving, Mr. Ben David created and displayed a turkey figure outside of his home. For the winter holidays, he displayed well-known Christmas characters, such as Santa and his reindeer.

"The positive comments from the public saying they like my displays make me feel proud," said Mr. Ben David.

Guidance counselor and friend Mary MacDonald, said, "He is a good mechanic, a great addition to our school, and a great Patriots fan."

"I like living on the Island because I was born here and it's in my blood," said Mr. Ben David. have seen the Island change an grow. Once your feet get in the Is land sands, you can't leave."

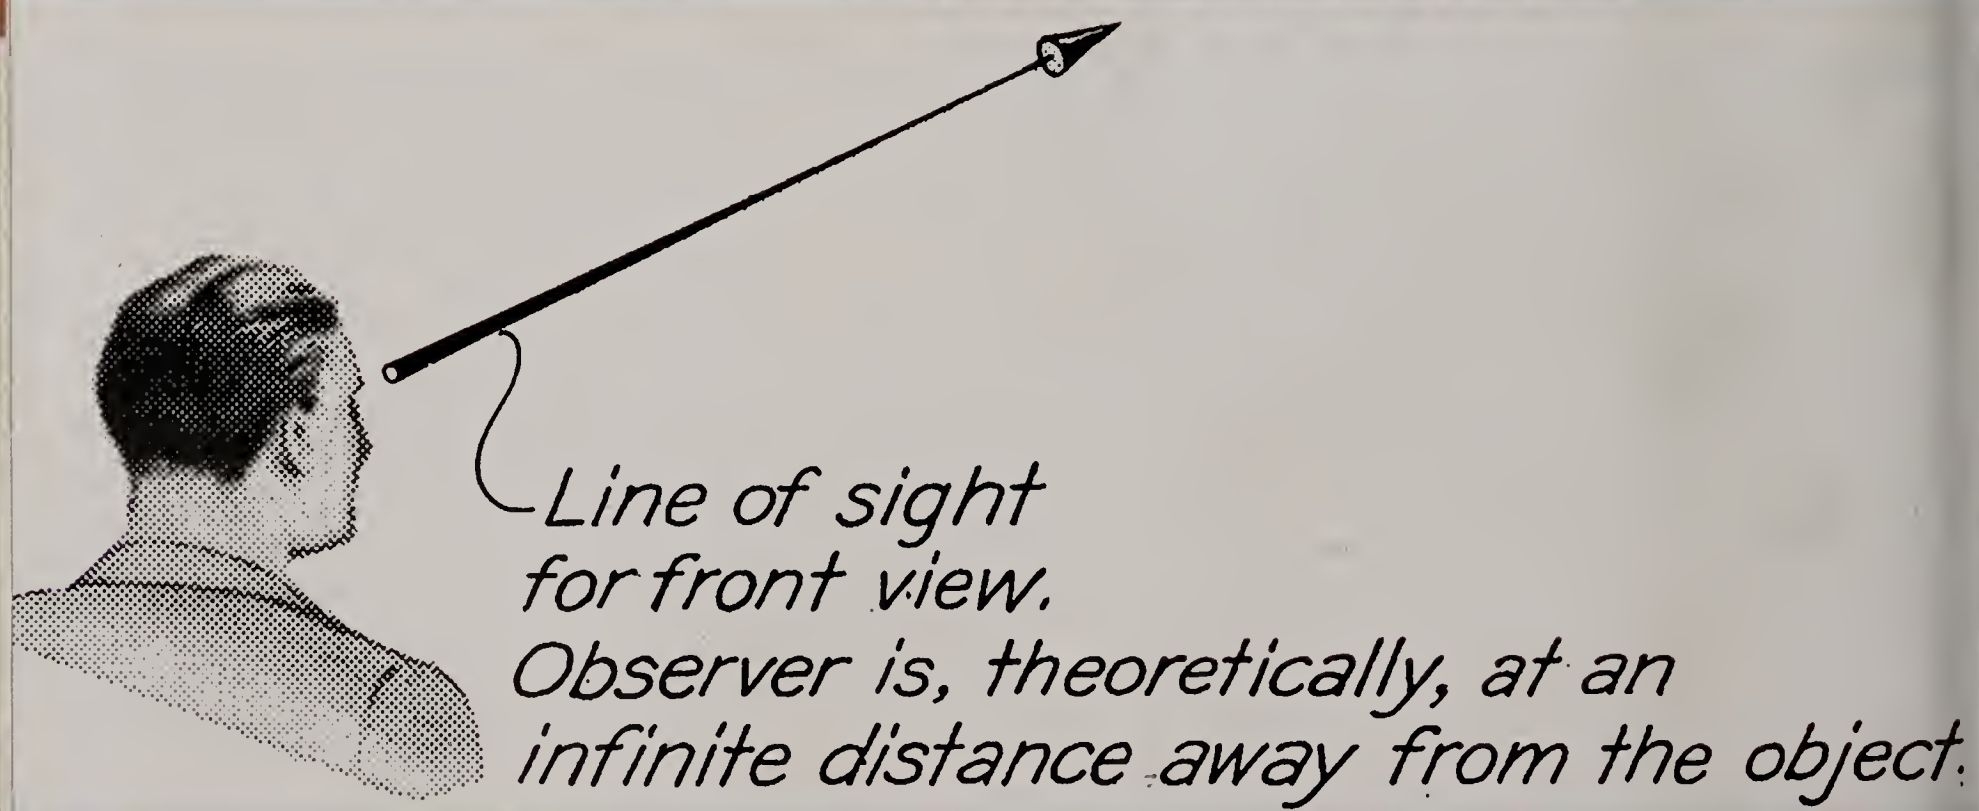
NATIONAL HONORS SOCIETY

The purpose of this organization is to create enthusiasm for scholarship, to stimulate a desire to render service, to promote leadership, and to develop character in the students of secondary schools.



Peer Outreach is an organization made up of students and teachers who are voted in by their peers based on who students would feel most comfortable going to for help or advice. The students and teachers who are voted in are taught how to help their friends when they are in need. Peer outreach members are also taught how to react to situations that they do not feel they should deal with alone. Students and teachers who are voted in are trying to become a trusted source for other students to rely on or to ask for advice.

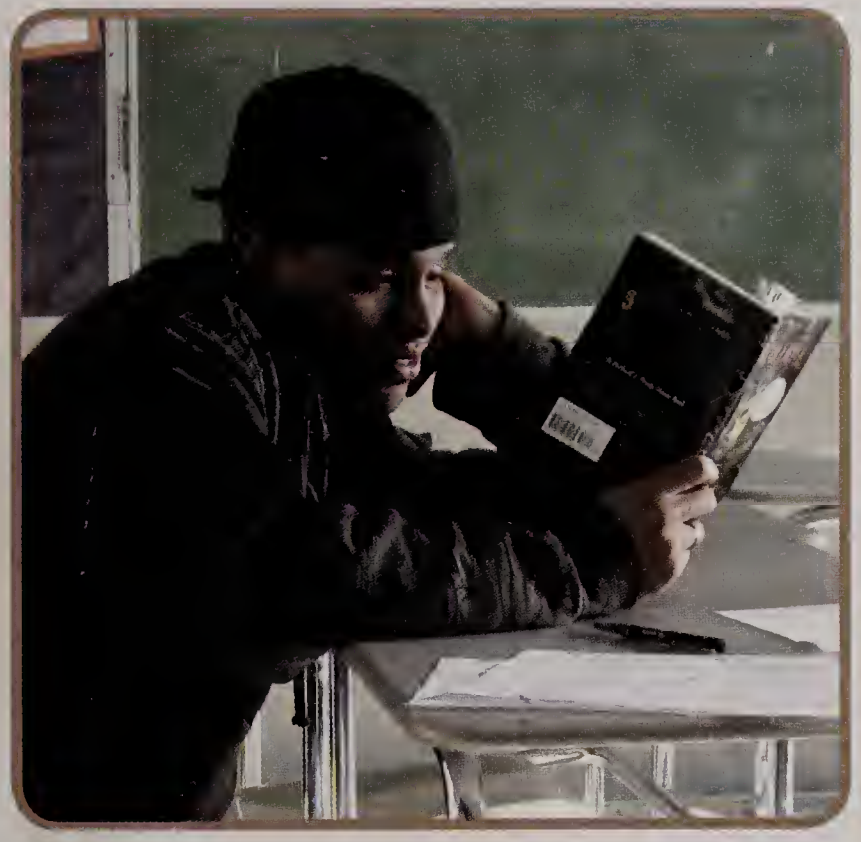
My name is Rafael Robadel. I am seventeen years of age and Brazilian. I lived in Mantenopolis, Espirito Santo with my parents and two brothers. My town has about 13,395 people. After school in Brazil, my friends and I played video games. Life was very good.

Five years ago my father came to the United States through Mexico, as did many Brazilians. He worked here for four years and then returned to Brazil. This year we all got visas to come to the United States. I came because my family came.

I've always wanted to know how it felt to live here. Coming here, I thought my life would be harder, and I turned out to be right in my thoughts. The fact that I'm not in my own country speaking my own language with the people I grew up with made my life here harder. When I arrived here, I felt strange because I didn't speak English. I didn't have the same freedom I had in Brazil or the many friends that always played video games after school. It was too hot when I arrived, but then it got too cold too fast. The climate here was very different. I wanted to return to Brazil on the first airplane!

Over time I became accustomed to the weather, the island, and the language. I went to school and everything was better because I found Brazilians my age. My life has been improving.



When we Brazilians come here, we have a goal: a goal of having a better future for ourselves and for our families. To achieve this, we have to work hard and do our best. Most of us leave some close family in Brazil to come here and work eighteen hours a day to obtain a dream. I feel bad because I know that most of the Brazilians here don't speak English, and that makes the dream even harder to reach. My hope is that the new president will finally help fix the immigration system so we can get the proper documents and not have to live in fear of the police.

CHILD DEVELOPEMENT

Early Education and Care exposes students to a more in-depth overview of the early childhood field beyond the vocational exploratory program. This course will prepare students for careers in early childhood education. On-site work experience and observations in licensed group child care facilities enables students to have hands on experience with children.

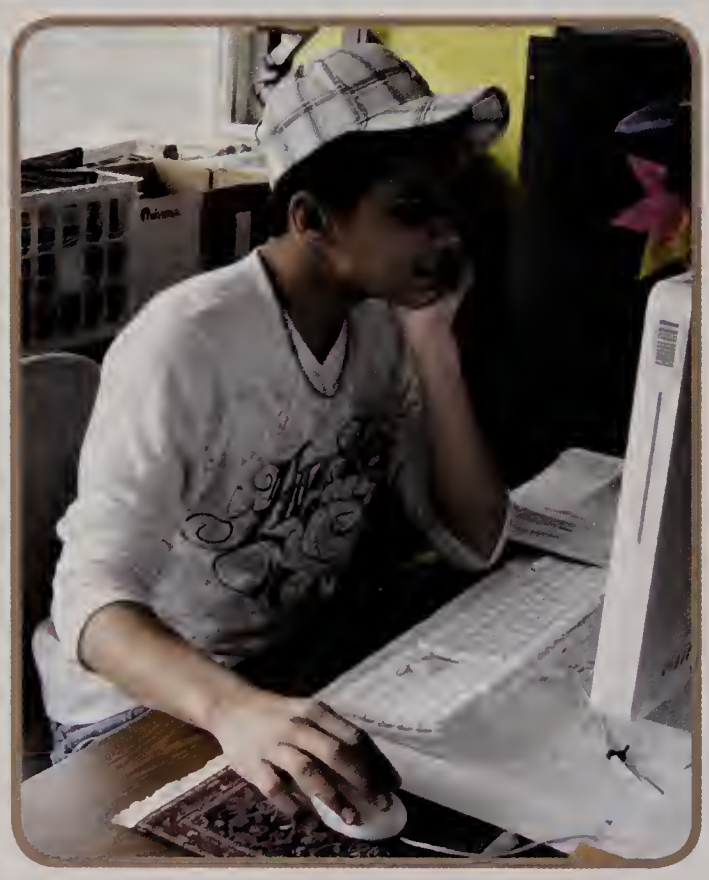
"I am from a small island in the Caribbean called Jamaica, where it is always hot. I lived there all my life until I moved to America two years ago. Everything is so different. Even though I am still living on an island, it feels weird, maybe because it is a lot smaller. I like it here, but I am a lot more comfortable in Jamaica.

"In Jamaica I wore a uniform to school and I started high school in seventh grade. I hated wearing a uniform. I have always wanted to wear whatever I wanted to school, but we only could wear regular clothes on Fridays.

"I enjoyed going to Sports Day in March, where all the classes compete against each other to see which class had the most athletic and competitive kids. We also had a 4H Club where kids from other high schools came to my school to compete in dance, singing, and show some of their creative side.

"In Jamaica, some kids went to school from 7 am to 12 noon or from 12 noon to 5 pm, I liked to go from 12 - 5 because I had time to sleep in, eat a lot more, and do my hair. We don't have school buses in Jamaica. You call your cab driver and he will come and pick you up at your house. That's what I did.

"In America kids graduate high school at 12th grade, but we graduate in 11th in Jamaica. I speak two languages - English and Jamaican Patois. I write English during school but when I go home after I speak in patois with my family because they understand. Only a few kids in the high school here know what I am saying if I do speak patois."



"Most of us arrive here because we have an objective and a dream of a better life. Our parents work many jobs day and night just to see us come to school. They do this with love because they know we are capable of accomplishing much in life and having a bright future." - Dhonathan Lemos

"Being an immigrant in the United States can be tough. Some of the citizens discriminate and don't agree that we should live here. But immigrants come here to become someone in their lives. They don't want to take anyone's place. I came here with the intention to work and raise money so I would have a better situation in Brazil. However, all the plans I made changed when I started to study at MVRHS. My father tried to change my mind, but I am strong. Here I am doing what I choose: studying.
For all of you, peace and love." - Norberto deAssis

Elisa Ronquillo, Freshman

Elisa Ronquillo moved to the United States from Mexico when she was about two or three years old.

Elisa enjoyed the two theater classes she took in the fall semester although she admits, “I hate going on stage.” She hopes to play soccer next fall, but for now her after-school hours are consumed with babysitting for her seven-year-old sister.

“I’m possibly moving next year back to Mexico. My dad has a business going on. It’s not exciting, because I don’t want to leave. ”

The Minnesingers, along with Dan Murphy, Jan Wightman, Jill Matrisciano, Daryl, Brian Weiland, Jeff Caruthers, Mr. Wightman, and the co-presidents of the Minnesinger parent group, traveled to Austria over April vacation 2008. Their three main stops were Salzburg, Krems, and Vienna; at each stop the Minnesingers stayed with homestay families, learning about the culture of Austria. Highlights of the trip included visiting a salt mine, singing and performing in the streets of Vienna, and learning folk dance in Krems.

AUSTRIA, ITALY, AND FRANCE

Over April vacation, 2008, Herr Card took some students to Austria, Italy, and France. While in Austria, they met up with the Minnesingers and saw them perform. In Italy, they went to Venice, and took a gondola ride. In France, they visited Paris, seeing the Eiffel Tower, and saw the Moulin Rouge. The trip was one of the most amazing experinces for all the students involved.

In February 2008, nine students traveled to Spain with Mr. Powell. They went to Toledo, Avia, Segovia, and Madrid. Highlights of the trip were learning how to make a traditional Spanish meal, visiting the Plaza Mayor in Segovia and, Madrid. They saw metal works in Toledo, ate tapas for lunch, and saw castles and aqueducts.

Conor and Becker are ready to launch.

Last November, the sailing team went to New Orleans to compete in the Great Oaks Regatta on Lake Pontchartrain. It was a national event, and the sailing team had to compete regionally in the Arnold Brown Regatta to qualify. At the regatta the MVRHS sailing team placed fifteenth out of twenty-eight teams. Besides sailing, the team got to see the city, and try Cajun cuisine, includng gumbo, alligator tail, and crawfish.

Emmie, Solvig, and Julie walked down an alley and saw a beautiful painting and a statue of a lady.

FRENCH CRÊPES

extraordinaire

STRAWBERRY NUTELLA WITH PISTACHIOS

MMM... BON APPÉTIT

One of my oldest family traditions is coming home after church on Sunday to eat crêpes with my family and relatives. Among my favorite medleys is cinnamon sugar; it's simple yet delicious. This combination derives from my German Mennonite heritage.

Prep time: 5 minutes Cook: 30 minutes

2 beaten eggs

1 1/2 cups milk

1 cup all purpose flour

1 tablespoon cooking oil

1/4 tsp salt

1 tablespoon sugar

1. Combine eggs, milk, flour, oil, salt, and sugar: beat till well mixed. Heat a lightly greased 6-inch skillet or crêpe pan; remove from heat. Spoon in 2 tablespoons batter; lift and tilt skillet to spread batter. Return to heat; brown on one side only. Invert over paper towels; remove crêpe. Repeat with remaining batter, greasing skillet occasionally. Makes 18 crêpes.

I love crêpes because they're healthy and delicious. You can fill them with almost anything you find desirable or is laying around in your kitchen - maybe last night's leftovers. Crêpes are a simple, elegant breakfast, lunch, dinner, or dessert. This low-fat recipe is easy to eat when you're on the go or want to pack a lunch; crêpes are palatable when hot or cold. Crêpes are great to surprise your mom for Mothers Day or impressing a loved one.

AMY SERTL'S SMORE CUPCAKES

Ingredients

- 3/4 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
- 3/4 teaspoon baking powder
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 2 large eggs
- 3/4 cup warm water
- 3/4 cup milk
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 and 1/4 teaspoon pure vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line standard muffin tins with paper liners; set aside. Sift together cocoa powder, flour, sugar, baking soda, baking powder, and salt into a large bowl. Add eggs, warm water, buttermilk, oil, and vanilla, and mix until smooth, about 3 minutes. Scrape down the sides and bottom of bowl to assure batter is well mixed.

Divide batter evenly among muffin cups, filling each 2/3 full. Bake until tops spring back when touched, about 20 minutes, rotating pan once if needed. Transfer to a wire rack; let cool.

Frosting

Fluff Frosting
1/2-3/4 lb. (2 or 3 sticks) butter, room temperature
1 lb. (2 cups) confectioner's sugar
1/2 tsp. vanilla
16 oz. tub of marshmallow cream (I recommend Fluff)

Cream the butter on high until it's light and fluffy. Add the confectioner's sugar, 1/4 cup at a time, and beat until fluffy each time. Beat in the vanilla until incorporated. Then mix in the Fluff and mix it up 'til it's all creamy. Transfer to pastry bag (if desired) and pipe onto cupcakes! (You can also cut the corner off a Ziploc bag and use that instead.) The tops are dusted with graham cracker crumbs, and each cupcake is topped with a square of Hershey's chocolate.
